

A Message to Noel

I feel like I don't have to register any of this because you know my thoughts and feelings intimately - as no one else does. But I am putting it out there so that others can see that even someone such as myself who is so close to you still feels 'lost' at some points is not above times of need.

In the scriptures when Jesus went to the cross, he said 'My God, my God, why have you forsaken me.' This is how I feel at present. Noel, you have been such a Guiding Light in my life these last 20+ years - something I could never have even dreamed of. You have led me through every tribulation I have had.

But now you have gone silent.

In a time where I am dealing with more negative stuff than I have in years. I am confident that I will make it through everything - as I always have - but it just feels strange not having your consoling voice here - helping me through. I need your Guidance on a number of things:

- How to manage my feelings about Natasha and Chris.
- What I should think about the inactivity with respect to my emails and FB - and then what I should do.
- Your thoughts on how I should manage myself with respect to St. Ignatius Church and Our NDG Family.
- How do I get myself to feel better - and to eliminate this general malaise.
- How to proceed with NuVo and Amazon.

It's funny - I really don't feel like you are silent - but rather that you are carefully watching and helping me in a time which is purposefully quiet - a time of preparation. Like you are still Guiding me - only quietly.

But I really dislike feeling this way.

I like to feel like I am moving forward and in this time I have no direction. Granted I have Andy and John and Justin and others to shepherd - but I need more - much more!
